

Mindfulness can be defined as paying attention in a particular way; on purpose, in the present moment, nonjudgmentally Jon KabaZinn

INTRODUCTION

This online, seldirected program is designed for those interested in cultivating mindfulness in their daily lives. It is important to understand that this is not a form of therapy, but an educational resource.

Mindfulness has beeshown to have multiple positive benefits when practiced regularly. Researched benefits include:

- x Reduced Stress
- x Improved memory and concentration
- x Increased emotional regulation
- x Reduction in rumination (the tendency to dwell on certain thoughts/events)
- x Greater relationship satisfaction

Practices and links to guided meditations will be introduce dulghout the sessions; the goal is to cultivate mindfulness daily. For those interested, the text indfulness: An eight week plan to finding peace in a frantic worldy Mark Williams and Danny Penmaras used in creating this program, and ishighly recommend.

Reflectiveworksheets are provide for tracking practice and gaining insights.

Please be aware:

Mindfulness is not a quick fix thaily problems and can create more stress in the process, as you are learning to hold your attention onespects in your life that may be difficulthingsyou may wish to distance yourself from through distraction or avoidance.

Mindfulness teaches us to lean towards the difficulty in our lives; we negative thoughts as mental events in an accepting on-judgmental and non-critical manner. Please ensure that you listen to your body, and if the practice becomes difficult, feel free to take breaks and look after yourself.

Mindfulnessis not recommended for some individuals who have had recent trauma, or are in the process of grieving.

If upsetting thoughts omemories arise during your actice, and you require immediate assistance, contact the Distress Centre (403.266.4357) you are a student fronthe University of Calgaryou canconnect with the SU Wellness Centre (403.210.93 fb) further support.